At Boston University, near Fenway Park, I learnt the value of education, hard work, and daily exercise. The friendships, both national and global, and the ethics I realised there formed the basis of who I realised I wanted to be.

Upon nearing completion of a major in International Relations (Economics/Security), and a minor in Business (Management), I was suggested to London.

I instructed tennis to my current referee, who worked in banking; BNY Mellon Bank, the second being more interested in fencing, Nomura, while studying Accounting in the Cayman Islands.

I returned to London, and from a personal account, abiding by a corporate ethic, and segregated accounts, grew AUM to close to $5 million, including Nikkei, S&P, DOW, and FTSE equities (2011). After which I returned to the Cayman Islands/Florida to further my studies.

Since then, I have returned to London, to further a career in finance.

Thanks,

Lewis RF Shaw

I have known Lewis since I met with him while he was instructing tennis in the Cayman Islands in 2006.

His enthusiasm and technical knowledge both improved my game and rekindled my love of the game. Lewis, in addition to being motivated, efficient and well organized, has communications skills and seems to enjoy a great rapport with people of all ages and backgrounds.

He has shown an interest in current affairs and finance and I am glad to learn he intends to pursue a career there. I would recommend Lewis highly for an entry level position; he would be a valuable asset to any organization.

Please feel free to contact me if you have any questions.

This letter is to confirm that Lewis Shaw spent an internship at the Tokyo bureau of the Financial Times in 2000. During that time, he supported the journalists in their research and helped develop a number of stories for the newspaper. He was immediately productive and quickly integrated into the multi-cultural team. He was industrious, intelligent and well-organised. He is an asset to the bureau, and also quickly became a popular member of the team. To conclude, I would recommend him highly.

Do feel free to contact me if you require any further details.
